

Lead Counsel (Oculus)

Oculus seeks a Lead Counsel to support its virtual reality content business. Oculus invents, manufactures and sells industry leading virtual reality headsets and operates a global virtual reality content and social platform. Success in this position will require you to provide creative and practical guidance to clients on different potential legal and business strategies to help foster a thriving ecosystem of developers, partners, and vendors. You will also be drafting and negotiating a wide variety of contracts, including game distribution agreements, content and software licenses, and developer-facing contracts and terms. This is a unique opportunity to work on cutting-edge issues in a fast-paced start-up environment, as Oculus leads the field of virtual reality.

Responsibilities

- Be a product counseling and transactional generalist: support business objectives related to games, social platforms, mobile, video, developer relationships, consumer products and live ops services
- Contract drafting, negotiation and advisory responsibilities for Oculus' virtual reality content and social platform business
- Build positive and influential relationships with executives, product teams and peers across Oculus and Facebook
- Collaborate with subject matters experts at Oculus and Facebook to analyze and communicate legal risks

Requirements

- JD degree with membership in at least 1 state bar
- 6+ years of experience, including prior in-house experience with technology or gaming companies and/or at a global law firm
- Experience with platforms, video gaming, entertainment media, and/or mobile.
- Ideal candidate will have demonstrated success building influence with technology entrepreneur executives and advising business and software teams directly
