

WE ARE NEW YORK'S LAW SCHOOL

Adjunct Faculty

Negotiation, Counseling, and Interviewing

New York Law School (NYLS) is seeking section professors for its Negotiation, Counseling, and Interviewing course. In coordination with the faculty member leading the class, the section professors will work with small groups of students on the simulation components of the course, helping prepare them for live client work, viewing recordings of their efforts, and critiquing and grading their work.

Course description: Negotiation, Counseling, and Interviewing is an experiential class that introduces students to the roles lawyers take on when preparing to solve clients' problems. Students individually handle a semester-long simulation in which they meet with their clients, research the factual and legal record, counsel their clients to prepare for settlement talks, and seek to negotiate a productive settlement. Classes meet in the evenings intermittently throughout the semester.

Requirements: J.D. and a minimum of four years of client-centered legal practice experience

Salary: Highly competitive

To apply: Send a statement of interest, resume, or CV to teaching@nyls.edu. Applications will be reviewed beginning September 12, 2018 and will continue to be reviewed until this position is filled.

About New York Law School

Founded in 1891, New York Law School (NYLS) is an independent law school located in the heart of New York City's legal, government, financial, and emerging tech centers. Known as "New York's law school," NYLS embraces the city as its classroom by complementing a rigorous legal education with an innovative and diverse set of "uniquely New York" experiential learning opportunities. Since opening its doors, NYLS has produced graduates who have gone on to hold high elected and appointed office in the city, lead large and small firms, and gain broad recognition as captains of business and industry. Its renowned faculty of prolific scholars has built the School's strength in key areas of the law, including business and finance; intellectual property, media, technology, and applied sciences; and government and public interest.

NYLS has more than 18,000 graduates and currently enrolls more than 900 students in its J.D. programs. The School also offers an advanced-degree program in Tax Law.
