

Anjali Rodrigues

Program Director | Reimagining Democracy

Anjali Rodrigues is an educator, teaching artist and leadership trainer who has been working in public schools and non-profit youth arts spaces for the past ten years. During her time as a master's student at the Harvard Graduate School of Education, Anjali taught Public Narrative and Community Organizing with Marshall Ganz at the Harvard Kennedy School. She has led workshops on public narrative and community organizing all over the country, including: United We Dream, March For Our Lives, the Bloomberg Mayor's Initiative, the American Federation of Teachers, Women Moving Millions, and many Harvard affiliates. Anjali is currently an 11th grade Humanities teacher in Boston Public Schools, runs a youth organizing program for high school students in the Boston area, and delivers trainings all over the country as a member of the Leading Change network.

LEADERSHIP COUNCIL
ON LEGAL DIVERSITY