JANET GROVE is a partner at Norton Rose Fulbright, based in their Vancouver office. Building on her experience and knowledge from years spent in corporate development and legal roles within industry, Janet helps clients in the technology and health sciences sectors: IT, health sciences, telecommunications, and clean-tech. She is sought out for her expertise and business approach to structuring and negotiating both merger and acquisition transactions and complex commercial relationships to develop, commercialize and acquire technology. This includes assisting with a variety of research and development, supply and licensing arrangements, and developing and advising on novel programs and collaborations involving technology.

Having worked for eight years in-house at a global biopharmaceutical company then listed on the TSX and NASDAQ, she also appreciates the ever-expanding role of corporate counsel and how best to support clients in those roles. During her years in industry, she held the position of vice president and corporate counsel, corporate secretary and business ethics officer, providing legal advice to the board and management on all aspects of the business, including corporate and technology acquisitions and divestures, issues related to research, clinical and pharmaceutical manufacturing projects and agreements.

Janet holds an LL.B. degree and B.S. (Biochemistry) degree from the University of Victoria.

JANE CASKEY is Global Chief Client Officer and Head of Risk Advisory at Norton Rose Fulbright. She is based in their London office. As chief client officer, Jane is responsible for formulating and driving an aligned and integrated client-facing strategy to generate global and cross-border connectivity for clients, focusing on the firm's industry sectors, practice groups, client program, and panel clients, as well as its risk advisory and client intelligence offering.

Jane's risk advisory practice involves working with global clients to identify, mitigate, and manage key risks across their businesses in a holistic and strategic manner, across business units and geographies, which includes analyzing the current and emerging risks within the context of the commercial goals of our clients and their risk culture and appetite. Jane's background is intellectual property law, including all aspects of trademarks and patent litigation. She has specialized knowledge of remedies, including complex transfer pricing and damages issues and recovery. She is also involved in advising clients on strategy for protecting IP rights, including trade secrets and data in relation to digital and cyber risks. Jane has extensive experience in resolving client issues through negotiation/alternative dispute resolution and has broad experience as an advocate on arbitrations and mediations.

Jane holds an LL.B. degree from McGill University and a B.A. from Western University.
