

Member Organization News

- After four months of remote work, Husch Blackwell LLP launched a virtual office for 40 of its lawyers, who can now “work from anywhere.”
- In an effort to increase diversity in STEM fields, IBM Corporation announced that it will provide 1,000 internships to graduates of P-TECH, an educational program that helps students from underserved backgrounds earn high school diplomas and associate degrees in STEM fields at no cost.
- Microsoft Corporation shared tips for creating a successful remote work culture.
- Major League Baseball announced that Michele Meyer-Shipp, the former Chief Diversity and Inclusion Officer at KPMG, will become its new Chief People and Culture Officer, overseeing talent processes and programs, workplace culture, and diversity and inclusion.